County Water Authority Directors approve model water reclamation ordinance for future CWA projects

The San Diego County Water Authority Board of Directors has unanimously approved a model water reclamation ordinance that establishes guidelines and regulations for implementation of future reclamation projects throughout San Diego County.

The model ordinance, approved May 11, was prepared as a basic model which could be adopted by the county's local water reclamation planning agencies.

According to Lester Snow, Water Authority general manager, "The intent of the ordinance is to maximize resource conservation and streamline implementation of reclamation projects by establishing a common set of regulations."

Basic provisions within the ordinance consists of mandatory use of reclaimed water where available and appropriate; common regulations for the building industry to provide plumbing to accommodate use of reclaimed water in new developments; and waste discharge restrictions directed toward protecting the quality of the reclaimed water supply.

Although the Water Authority's board has just formally adopted the ordinance, several cities within the county are already proceeding with adoption of the ordinance and have begun to prepare implementation procedures.

Ultimately, all of the county's water and wastewater agencies considering reclamation projects are expected to adopt the basic provisions contained in the new ordinance.

The adopted model will set the state for the Water Authority's aggressive effort to reclaim nearly 200 million gallons of water daily by the year 2010.

Use of this water for irrigation of parks, freeways, golf courses, common residential open space and agriculture is expected to free up enough imported water to serve the needs of a half-million residents

The San Diego County Water Authority imports water to serve 2.2 million people in the San Diego region through its 25 member agencies.

Organizations stage summit meeting on Spring Valley revitalization effort

Leaders of more than a dozen community organizations will meet in Spring Valley on Wednesday, June 7 to discuss local revitalization efforts.

Under a three-year pilot county program, a Revitalization Advisory Council developed proposals to upgrade Spring Valley's roads, parks and flood control facilities and promote local economic development.

This summit meeting of community representatives has been called to discuss how local groups can cooperate to carry out revitalization plans.

The meeting will be held on Wednesday, June 7, at the Bancroft School Auditorium, 8805 Tyler Street, Spring Valley at 7 p.m. The public is welcome.

San Diego Blood Bank to open East County Donor Center this summer

East county residents soon will have a permanent location of the San Diego Blood Bank close to home where they can make volunteer blood donations, autologous or self-donation for scheduled surgery, directed donations for specified patients or store their own blood for unexpected future use.

The new East County Donor Center of the San Diego Blood Bank will be located at 8881 Fletcher Parkway in the Fletcher Parkway Medical Center, La Mesa. Its doors will open this summer.

Currently the average demand for blood by East County hospitals is 1,400 pints of blood per month

The high demand for blood coupled with numerous requests by East County residents for a local donor center for autologous and directed donations were the principal reasons for establishing this new East County Donor Center.

"By 1991, the population of the East County is projected to be nearly 432,000," said San Diego Blood Bank Medical Director Victor J. DePratti, M.D. "The purpose of the new East County Donor Center is to afford area residents with a convenient location to participate in the many varied San Diego Blood Bank programs on a regular basis."

Billy Frank, champion of senior causes

She's energetic, intelligent, compassionate, articulate and enterprising. She moves quickly and speaks rapidly. She's an attorney who has spent the past 15 years securing the legal rights of senior citizens in San Diego County. She's Billy Frank, founding director of Senior Citizens Legal Services.

"We represent more than 6,000 seniors annually with legal problems ranging from wills to conservatorships to consumer fraud to physical and mental abuse," states Frank. "We serve people 60 and over at not charge regardless of their means. I personally talk to 100 or more clients each month." She also gives speeches at senior centers, adult education classes and service clubs.

When asked what the most important cases were, she responded, "They are equally important, especially to the person with the problem. We tend to see different problems in different age groups. In the sixties, financial security and retirement problems are common. As seniors enter their seventies, consumer fraud, competency problems and long term health care become important issues. In the eighties, we see some seniors become victims of mental and physical abuse."

A number of seniors have been rescued by SCLS from substance abusing children or others who move into their homes, hold them hostage and cash their pension checks.

One case involved two spinster sisters in their 90's who lived together. One was in a wheelchair and the other used a walker. They were held prisoners in their own home for over a year before Frank and her associates stepped in and got them released. A stranger had stopped by one day as one sister watered her flowers, began talking about religion and was invited in. The stranger put locks on the doors, and the telephone up high so that the women, who were no more than 5 feet tall, could not reach them. The stranger cashed their pension checks. It was a neighbor who finally called Senior Citizen Legal Services.

Frank and her associates have prevented many elderly people from losing control of their lives by resisting conservatorships. Heirs will sometimes attempt to take control of assets they hope to inherit, and the senior no longer has control over their own property. "It's one thing for children to be concerned," says Frank, "but quite another matter for them to take control so that seniors can no longer do what they want with their own property."

In another case, a mother in her 80's had an agreement with her child that should her health fail, the mother would voluntarily take a medicine that would end her life. The mother became ill, though she was still living in her home. The child called long distance repeatedly, pressuring the mother to carry out the euthanasia plan. The mother was very frightened and called Senior Citizens Legal Services. They gathered up evidence and let the child know that pressuring a person to kill themselves in illegal in California.

SCLS has helped numerous seniors retain their homes when their spouse goes into a nursing home by making it possible for them to be covered by Medi-Cal.

They also represent many seniors in consumer fraud cases. "One couple was sold a motor home that was a real lemon," remembers Frank. "The RV dealer would not right the situation. We stepped in and got the couple's money back for them."

Frank was born and raised on a ranch in Texas and received her schooling in Ft. Worth. She graduated from the University of Utah

Jack Gormley, Mt. Miguel

Mt. Miguel's Jack Gormley retires after 29 years of teaching By Kathy Logue

At the end of June, Mt. Miguel will be saying "Goodbye, Au revoir, Adios and Vale" to retiring language teacher Jack Gormley.

Gormley has spent twentynine years as a member of Mt. Miguel's teaching staff. During that time he has taught English, Spanish, French and Latin. He sums up his teaching experiences as being "very interesting and very demanding.

He has already planned what he will do during his retirement. Although he intends to go back to school to study Italian, history and literature, he has a few "activities that I just want to do." In addition to traveling, he hopes to learn how to cook a la francaise, "swim properly," skull a boat, improve his snorkeling skills and generally do some "creative loafing."

But even with all of this recreation and study, his years at Mt. Miguel will not be forgotten. "I expect very much to miss teaching French."

Rose Society brings its show to Marketplace at The Grove June 10

Dunn began his teaching career at Mt. Miguel. He has taught many different subjects such as electronics, auto shop, graphing, algebra, professional art graphing, and math. Currently, he is teaching two different math courses and metal shop. He commented that he really did not have one favorite subject to teach because it is fun to have a variety of subjects.

The first thing Dunn will do after graduation is "not make a plan." While relaxing, he will read, garden, watch T.V., travel and visit with friends

Dunn feels that at Mt. Miguel, everyday has been a new experience. He sums up his teaching career by saying, "It never gets boring!" He added that his fondest memories at Mt. Miguel are of the many people he has worked with.

or Spring Valley as their homes because traffic pressures of San Diego City became too much to live with.

Now our local residents are leaving these thriving communities for the same reason. And many others are looking toward the undeveloped backcountry for the same reason.

Even those who have recently moved to the back country "civilization" limits are becoming fearful that there is no way to escape one of the most prevalent problems that come with rural living - roads, their quantity and quality.

Jack Maltester, president of Californians for Better Transportation, fully cognizant of road problems, views the situation as even more "threatening" to rural residents as the problems they moved from.

In a communication addressing these problems he says, "Crumbling roads and crowded freeways are a big city' problem to most Californians."

"The transportation crisis conjures images of bumper-to-bumper congestion, and gridlock is something rural Californians may easily dismiss. In fact, many rural citizens are former participants in the big city rat race who escaped for exactly those reasons."

"Ironically, it is rural California which is most threatened by the state's retreat from dealing with transportation as a statewide issue.

"Last year, California spent about the same amount on road and highway construction, adjusted for inflation, than it did in 1948. The state ranks dead-last among 50 states in per capita spending on transportation," Maltester said.

He points out that well-off urban areas purchase new streets, while rural communities make do with potholes.

Because most people live and vote in urban areas, Sacramento gives most attention to relieving city problems.

Maltester said that his organization -Californians for Better Transportation - is using its effort toward urging rural citizens to make

Many residents chose La Mesa, Lemon Grove, themselves heard in demanding a sound, statewide transportation network because that is in the best interest of all Californians

Some statistics furnished by Californians for Better Transportation are as follows: California, with 174,081 miles of public roadway, is the second-largest system in the country.

The state maintains 15,182 miles; counties control 69,614; municipalities, 55,397; and 33,888 miles are under federal and other controls.

Californians travel 207 billion miles a year, the most in the nation; and state-maintained roads carry 13.67 million miles of centerline vehicle traffic a year.

Californians lose 300,000 hours a day due to freeway congestions resulting in 75 million hours a year in gridlock. Californians pay $1.69 billion a year in congestion lost time - $6 a vehicle or $97 a driver in added fuel and maintenance due to potholed and poorly maintained local road sys-

From 1964 to 1984, California increased state highway lane miles 29%, but vehicle miles increased 138%.

Congestion tomorrow:

Delayed motorists' hours are projected to increase by 174% between 1985 and 1995, and another 65% by 2005.

Commute times are expected to double, and maybe triple in most urban areas by the end of the century.

By 2000, California will have 26% more licensed drivers; 22.4% more registered vehicles; and a 30.5% increase in travel.

California's Transportation Commission and its Department of Transportation is under-funded by $4 billion and had stopped advertising for construction contracts for several months.

A typical Californian, driving 11,000 miles, pays about $364 annually in highway users and vehicle-related taxes.

Maltester says that only an informed public and the voice of opinion leaders can produce sorely needed action from state government.

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

Baseball in the "Depression Days" was our sport in the Lake Minnetonka area, a suburb of Minneapolis, Minnesota. Before the "boob tube" and excluding my favorite heros on radio: Jack Armstrong, Lil' Orphan Annie, and Buck Rogers, my life was baseball in the summer and hockey in

The term "baseball" usually meant big league using a small hard ball and all players wearing gloves. My game was called soft ball, diamond ball, or kitten ball, and was played without the use of gloves (except the catcher), using a smaller diamond or playing field. Our game was not slow-pitch or lob-ball, it was very fast-pitch.

When a new ball came across the plate, hurled by a fast side-arm pitcher, it was smoking. Then to catch a well-hit line drive in the infield bare-handed was like stopping a speeding bullet. I was always sporting a broken knuckle or swollen hand, and I have scars to prove it. One time I tried to stop a sizzler coming down at 2nd. The ball went through my hands and hit me square in the old "snozola." It was not broken, but it did bleed profusely.

We played an official game every Tuesday evening and Sunday afternoon. Our sports stadium was a farmer's cow pasture, including all the hazardous, slippery objects that came with it. Guess that we used for bases?-The "dried objects." Even without a scheduled game, us young uns' would be playing every day because we were so crazy about baseball

On Tuesdays, the married men would play the single guys. Then on Sunday, a team made up of the cream of those two teams, called the "Stubbs Bay Spartans," would challenge the other ball teams in the "Lake Conference."

The single guys would not let me play on their team because I was only 10-years-old. I would constantly beg the married men, "Please let me play with you Old Folks."

If the married bunch was short a player, they would let me fill in for them even though "I wasn't

After a year or so playing with the "Old Folks" I graduated to a permanent position at 2nd base for the Singles and also the Sunday "Stubbs Bay

Our big time heros were the "Minneapolis Millers," of the American Association and a farm team of the New York Giants with such names as Rosy Ryan, Joe Hauser, and Andy Cohen, just to mention a few. Andy Cohen played 2nd base, the same position I played, so I was soon nicknamed Andy or Cohen, and then finally the full name, Andy Cohen.

Baseball cards were just coming into popularity about that time, and I had a million of them. By saying "Wheaties" box tops we could join the "Knot Hole Gang" and get into the Miller's home games at old Nicollet field for free.

In the early '60s, a new team was added to the American League roster and appropriately named the "Minnesota Twins" for the Twin Cities, Minneapolis and St. Paul. After over 25 years of hard play, the Minnesota Twins won the series to become the World Champs in 1987.

Hoorah for the "home team!" They had come a long way from old Nicollet Field to Bloomington Stadium, and then to the "Dome Stadium" in the heart of downtown Minneapolis, a most spectacular modern age structure, except when it snows too

I still contend that baseball, professional or amateur, is the finest and cleanest of all team competitive sports. It just requires players of average proportions with lots of skill.

In those good old days, I could give all the stats pertaining to any Minor League team or player, but today I know "diddly" about any sport except "where the fish are biting."

Many thousands of older taxpayers may have overpaid their personal income taxes for the past four years because of the overly complicated instructions in the 1040A and 1040 tax booklets.

Who's responsible?

In your issue of May 25, 1989, Mrs. Sandy Knoblauch writes about kids playing on the trolley tracks. All will agree that this is a dangerous sport.

However, Mrs. K. takes the attitude that it is the responsibility of "the Lemon Grove City Council, the MTB, and the La Mesa/Spring Valley School Board" to keep the kids off the tracks.

Fences have been erected to protect civilians and tracks. If parents lack the care or gumption to teach their children to recognize danger and respect property, it certainly is not right to blame all of the above groups or the general public for this problem.

Let the teaching of respect and responsible behavior start at home.

Mt. Miguel Band and Specialty Corp. plans weekend fundraiser

The Mt. Miguel Band and Specialty Corps. has finished another award-winning year. As the year closes and the many competitions and performances become memories, these young people feel the Matador pride. They are dedicated musicians and students who work hard throughout the year.

To support their efforts, the Mt. Miguel Music & Specialty Corps. Parent Organization must raise funds to pay for buses and uniforms. The next major fund raiser for this school year will be a swapmeet, hot dog stand and car wash, held this weekend June 3-4, at Mt. Miguel High School

With a yearly budget of $90,000, this will help defray costs from this year and give the students a head start for the next season.

So, make plans to come and bring your appetite, dirty car, and find your treasures. The support of the community is greatly appreciated and needed.

At $79,900,* this home is a whole lot better than anything you'll find in a mobile home community

Here's an opportunity that won't last long. The chance to own a brand-new manufactured two-bedroom home starting at only $79,900*! This private, terraced community is close to shopping and the trolley, so you only drive when you want to. Design-it-yourself custom interior and exterior options available. Nice views. Your choice of four basic homes up to 1440 square feet. Unlike mobile home communities, you own your lot, which means no rent increases ever. Like we said, we re a whole lot better

Moore wins LGSD Mt. Miguel's Larry Nordell awarded Christa McAuliffe Fellowship

By Norma Alonzo

The award-winning Biology/ Chemistry teacher, Larry Nordell, has again put Mt. Miguel High School on the map. He has been selected from over 150 applicants as one of five outstanding teachers to be awarded the Christa McAuliffe Fellowship. A special award's presentation was held on May 23 in Governor Deukmajian's office in Sacramento.

The $16,000 fellowship is a federally-funded monetary award honoring the late Sharon Christa McAuliffe who was killed on board the Challenger space shuttle in January, 1986. It inspirits the courage and passion she felt for education by providing scholarships for outstanding K-12 teachers so that they may improve their knowledge and skill for the better education of their students.

The applicants must present a program of how they propose to accomplish this goal. A statewide panel of prestigious educators and parents select the proposal which they think most captures the spirit Sharon McAuliffe brought to the world of education. Although it is a nationwide award, the selection process is done within the separate states.

Larry Nordell, who has been teaching in the Grossmont-Union High School District for 15 years, has been known for his many achievements and also the achievements of his students. Among other awards, he was voted "Most Favorite Teacher" by

Larry Nordell, Mt. Miguel

Mt. Miguel students in 1983, was a Midwest Regional Award Winner for Outstanding Chemistry Teacher in 1986, and this year, won the Golden Apple Award for teaching.

His proposal is to go back to school, mainly SDSU, next year and submerge himself into a fully chemical education. By coming back as a "recently educated" teacher, Nordell hopes to not only be able to design a curriculum that is up-to-date with modern advances in chemistry, but will also give the students the best college preparation possible.

Says Nordell, "I'm really looking forward to it. I will miss teaching for a while, but I'll be

Traffic stats

The California Highway Patrol has cited 408 motorists in the East County for having tinted windshields, according to Captain Don Watkins, commander of the east sector of the county during the May 1-26 period.

"If the auto vehicle windows (windshield and windows at the drivers' seat level) were not factory installed, they become a citable offense," he said. Usually, there is approximately an inch of untinted area at the top.

In other infractions: 1,214 speeders were cited, 700 of them were exceeding the 55 mph limit; 280 DUI's were arrested; 993 passengers were unbuckled; and 1,262 carried no evidence of insurance.

In Lemon Grove during the week of May 21-27, 67 were speeders; 3 were arrested as DUI's; 3 were unbuckled; and 22 and no evidence of insurance.

Law School in 1950 and went into private practice in Salt Lake City as a criminal defense attorney.

Frank came to San Diego in 1956 to be married. She is the mother of three children - two boys who are professional musicians and a girl who is a recreational therapist working with the

She passed the California bar in 1958. In the early 1970's, Frank received a Master's Degree in Education from San Diego State University. "I decided it was time to do something for humanity," she says. "The elderly seemed the most vulnerable. It's no good to give people legal rights unless they can be enforced. How can people living on $500 per month afford attorney fees of $100-$300 per hour?" She began her work as an advocate for the elderly in 1974 when she started with Senior Citizens Legal Services.

Frank has seen some improvement in the situation for senior citizens over the past 15 years, and she has seen some deterioration in their life style.

She sees that there are far more legal services available to senior citizens than there were when she began. Adequate nutrition and transportation are more affordable and available now.

The biggest difficulties Frank sees for seniors are the decrease in affordable housing and affordable medical care. She also believes that the quality of life has deteriorated for seniors in San Diego because of population and industrial growth. "It's much easier to live in a quiet little town than it is in a metropolitan area focused on industry," says Frank. "In a small town, people can actually walk to the grocery store without fear." In the 70's the federal government passed the Older Americans Act. An important part of this historic legislation allocates funds to state governments to provide competent and free professional legal services to the elderly. That money, distributed through the San Diego County Area Agency on Aging, forms the base funding for Frank's work. The State Bar of California is also a major contributor. In addition, SCLS work is supported by donations from clients and contributions from individuals and businesses.

In 1974 SCLS began with Frank as the only attorney and one office in downtown San Diego. They now have six attorneys, four paralegals, 26 locations around San Diego County and a LawMobile which services rural areas. With the increase in the population and the financial pinch getting tighter for seniors, Frank sees a need twice that of Senior Citizens Legal Services' resources. In some cases, seniors have had to wait two months to get an appointment. "However, we always get the emergencies right in," says Frank.

Part of the need has been filled the past year by HICAP - Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program. This is a state program supported by a grant from the California Department of Aging. Their services have been brought to San Diego and Imperial counties under the umbrella of Pro*Tech, the nonprofit corporation under which Senior Citizens Legal Services also operates and of which Frank is also director.

HICAP provides community education forums and one-on-one counseling on the subject of health insurance coverage and assists seniors with medical claims and billings. They have several forums scheduled in San Diego County this spring and summer and counsel seniors at 26 sites in San Diego County and four in Imperial County. Frank sees a need for at least doubling Senior Citizens Legal Services case load beyond what they are currently able to serve. "But, it takes more money than the government will provide to meet the need," says Frank.

"We now have an attorney devoted to medical issues. We need one who is an expert in housing. For example, there's lots of injustice in mobile home housing for seniors. Parks are being updated and there's no place for the little single wide mobile home that so many seniors live in," notes Frank.

Advancing age can bring with it difficulties that require legal assistance. However, with people like Billy Frank and organizations like Senior Citizens Legal Services, many seniors are being assured their rights without fear of financial disaster.

In the East County area, Senior Citizen's Legal Services serves the following locations twice monthly:

La Mesa Senior Center, Lakeside Gardens, Spring Valley Park, El Cajon Wells Park Senior Cen-

Free lecture focuses on summer survival for parents and children

To a child or adolescent, the arrival of summer means school is our, lots of free time and fun, fun, fun! For parents, especially working parents, it means an active yet unoccupied child with plenty of time to get underfoot and into trouble. The result is usually a frustrated parent attempting to keep the child or adolescent occupied with constructive activities and a child or adolescent straining to enjoy the summer.

According to Mitchel D. Perlman, Ph.D., a clinical psychologist specializing in child, adolescent and family psychotherapy, "With proper planning, parents can provide a healthy amount of structure while allowing children and adolescents enough freedom to enjoy the summer months."

Alvarado Parkway Institute (API) Child & Adolescent Center is presenting a special, free lecture, "Summer Survival: Creating a Balance of Structure and Freedom," June 14, at 7:30 p.m. in the API Child & Adolescent Center Gymnasium at 6535 Alvarado Road in San Diego.

Dr. Perlman, the featured speaker for the presentation, will address both the common concerns of parents and typical complaints of children and adolescents during the summer

He will also offer suggestions for a viable summer program providing structure without conflict and allowing for mutual enjoyment of the season.

To R.S.V.P. this free presentation, please call API Child & Adolescent Center at 583-9991.

Volunteers needed to care for patients at home in Kaiser Permanente program

The shift in recent years toward outpatient care and reduced hospital stays, has created a need for volunteers to help those people who are now homebound due to illness or injury.

Kaiser Permanente's Home Care Department, which provides 3,000 home visits per month throughout the county, needs volunteers now. Those interested in helping others will be trained to provide companionship, emotional support and practical assistance with errands, childcare, transportation, and meal preparation.

"Training also includes classes in listening and communication skills, physical care, psychosocial aspects of illness and ethical issues and spiritual support," says Diane Hazard, Kaiser Permanente's Home Care Volunteer Coordinator.
